It does not matter how many tumbles one makes in life so long as he does not get soiled. It is only the man who has to stop and be washed that loses the race.

It is a pleasing sight to see old men retaining a buoyancy of spirit, but they have to be careful not to overdo the thing and display childishness instead of youthfulness.

It is a queer thing that monarchs and presidents usually make a big army or naval review on an occasion for preaching peace. To most people such reviews are suggestive of the chip on the shoulder.

What is overwork for one person may be nothing but healthful activity for another. So much depends upon the bodily and nervous condition that no set rule can be applied to govern all workers alike.

Most people will agree that Dr. Cook, the explorer, has done wisely in turning to farming. His recent experience in Copenhagen has probably convinced him that people generally take no stock in his north pole assertions.

Ideals of character are not always as broad and high and positive as they might be. Some people think that because they do not lie, steal, or break the law their character is about perfect. That is nothing but a negative character. True character is positive; positively generous in its attitude towards others, positive in its sympathy with what is right and true, positive in the matter of citizenship and of religion.

When a proud father boasts that a "paid of twins" has been born to him he means two children and not four. But a pair of twins means four children just as surely as a pair of teams means four horses or four mules. Yet the phrase, "pair of twins" will probably continue as an error of speech just so long as twins come into the world. Still it is as well to remember that two children at a birth means twins and just twins only.

Ores marketed for week ending Nov. 18th 1911, from the Baxter-Miami district.

The demand of the mine operators for a $48 base was finally met before Saturday night in the case of a few lots of high-grade ore, while ore carrying heavy iron went somewhat higher than this in a few instances. It is a significant fact that while the shutdown threat did not put up the price of ore, it at the same time put up the price of spelter. The high price for zinc ore last week will be in excess of $50. The base range was $43 to $46 for the major portion of the tonnage sold.

Calamine ores were strong at $25 to $28 per ton, and a fair production was made.

The attitude to be assumed by the producers for this week is still one of conjecture. Saturday nothing could be learned officially from the Ore Producers' Association. It is reported that at least a portion of the association has held meetings since the meeting last Wednesday night.

The production of the week was lower than had been anticipated at the beginning of the week. With cold weather coming on, an apparent cut in production which may become greater, a heavy cut into the surplus stocks with a new demand from some sources making itself felt, the district is likely to have an era of better prices for ore and a more equitable ratio between ore and spelter before the close of the winter.

Lead ores sold at $59 to $60, with rumors of $61 that refused to be quieted, but which could not be confirmed. The evidence pointed to its payment, however, and conditions in the pig lead market are also in favor of the advance rumored.

The addition of another buyer in this field in the St. Louis Smelting and Refining Company has started a competition that is likely to make still higher prices for the field if the buying continues.

The production is about normal, if anything, a trifle short. The additional activity in the Miami camp is proving up a tremendous prospective production of lead ore from that camp, which will help fill the needs of the four smelters of this district and the occasional buyer that drops in from other districts.
